Présentation

Activité détaillée

Watt & Well is specialized in the development of harsh conditions (high temperature, recurring shocks, high levels of vibration, EMC, radiation) and highly reliable compact power supplies and electric motor control units. Working with leading world corporations in oilfield services and aerospace industries, Watt & Well is also active in the e-mobility and industrial applications sectors. Watt & Well is committed to providing rapid results to all aspects related to power electronics throughout a project, from the requirements definition to the optimization of an application and so on until rapid prototyping capabilities. Numerous advantages could be derived from a high temp power electronics design that positively affects the footprint, the weight, and the reliability of a system.
